CALIFORNIA AVOCADO MARKETING AND SEASON FORECAST ANNOUNCED

IRVINE, Calif. (February 3, 2023) – The California Avocado Commission announced its marketing plans for 2023 along with the early season California crop forecast for its fiscal year 2022-23. The harvest estimate is 257 million pounds of avocados, which is a slight decrease compared to the 2021-22 season crop volume of 276 million pounds.

“The recent California rainfall has been welcomed by our growers throughout all districts,” said Jeff Oberman, president of CAC. “Growers have related increased sizing and crucial replenishing of water sources during my recent visits to all production regions. We do not yet know if there will be any change to the expected harvest timing, however excitement is building from our retail and foodservice partners for the kick-off of the California season.”

The majority (243 million pounds) of the California avocado harvest is expected to be the Hass variety. The remaining forecast is Lamb Hass 7 million pounds, GEM 6 million and about 1 million from other varieties that also are commercially grown in California.

Weather and market conditions will be key factors for when California avocado growers begin harvesting and some growers may delay picking to allow their avocados time to increase in size. California avocado volume is expected to begin ramping up around March, with peak availability from April through July then tapering off through Labor Day.

“We are eagerly anticipating peak California avocado season in the spring and summer months with additional volume for promotions and customized Fresh California Avocado marketing support for our foodservice customers,” said Oberman.

CAC is continuing its advertising campaign “the best avocados have California in them” with new creative executions to keep the communications fresh. Content will include helpful California avocado tips, grower spotlights and new creative videos that demonstrate just how special California avocados are. Customized foodservice promotions with targeted customers continue to be a key component of California avocado marketing supports.

Operators can plan ahead for seasonal menus featuring California Avocados with inspiring recipes on the CAC foodservice page, featuring all dayparts from beverages to desserts. The foodservice resources there also include culinary education sessions, product details and nutrition facts.
